Tourism development actions

Municipality of Gavdos

The island of Gavdos is the southernmost point of Greece and Europe and has been included in the Natura 2000 protection program. The island is inhabited by few permanent residents throughout the year and tourist facilities are basic and scarce, although we receive about 9,000 - 10,000 tourists per year with a growing trend. We would like to protect our unique natural environment from the negative impacts of tourism.

The participant depending on his skills can help in the following actions: informing the tourists, preservation and promotion of archaeological monuments, development of circular economy actions in tourism, development of tourism products based on local cultural heritage, developing of an action plan for the island to become a green destination
